

Parameter Passing Properties

	By Value void foo(Cube a) { ... }	By Pointer void foo(Cube *a) { ... }	By Reference void foo(Cube &a) { ... }
Exactly what is copied when the function is invoked?
Does modification of the passed in object modify the caller's object?
Is there always a valid object passed in to the function?
Speed
Programming Safety			